Subject: Thank you for the recognition

Dear Kaleen and SRFB,
Thank you so much for the recognition of service. It means a great deal and I'm so honored to have served the Board over much of the last two decades. And while we've accomplished an incredible amount, we will keep working together to recovery our cherished salmon.
In conservation,
Carol

Re: Washington Department of Fish and Wildlife Reclassification of Northern Pike

Dear Chairman Carpenter:

On behalf of the Washington Salmon Recovery Funding Board (SRFB), I am writing to express support for your staff's recommended reclassification of northern pike (Esox lucius) from 'Prohibited Level 3' classification to 'Prohibited Level 1' classification. This change in classification would help prevent detrimental impacts of northern pike on native salmonids by allowing the department's fisheries managers to initiate emergency measures and rapid response activities.

To the best of our knowledge, northern pike are less than 10 miles from Grand Coulee dam, which makes them approximately 50 miles from the anadromous portion of the Columbia River. Recent monitoring results show that northern pike are continuing to move towards the anadromous portion of the river. Should northern pike make it into the anadromous portion of the river, these voracious predators could have devastating effects on salmon and steelhead. The SRFB considers northern pike entering the anadromous portion of the Columbia River to constitute an emergency.

Detection of northern pike in the Columbia River is a matter of when, not if, as illustrated by a 2019 Northwest Power and Conservation Council Independent Science Advisory Board Report¹. It will be essential that, once detected, emergency measures identified in RCW 77.135.090 and rapid response activities identified in RCW 77.135.060, be triggered if we are to minimize the negative impacts of northern pike predation on salmon and steelhead.

Thank you for considering this recommended change in classification. If we can provide additional information about this important issue, please do not hesitate to contact Kaleen Cottingham, Director, Recreation and Conservation Office at kaleen.cottingham@rco.wa.gov.

Sincerely,

Phil Rockefeller
Chair, Salmon Recovery Funding Board
